We are currently looking for another weimaraner as a companion. He is very affectionate, but loves to bark, of which visitors get the worst of! Any advise on this would be appreciated.

He is now very good on recall but doesnt like being on the lead, would like to get him more socialised in a safe environment due to his issues with male dogs, i would like to join the club, so anyone wanted to sponsor us would be great. x

A four and a half year old male named Stokes, who is retired, and a new female puppy named Ashleigh, who is five and a half months old. I am of Scottish descent, so I just had to take a look at your wonderful wee site and sign in on your guestbook. I love everything and anything Scottish. I am proud of my heritage. I show in conformation, and am getting ready to jump into the breeding aspect of things. Still have a few years to go, but now is the time to start learning and preparing. I can't believe that the UK has put a ban on tail docking. To me that is just wrong. This breed looks so much better with the short tail. If they are out in the field, it makes things easier. They can get broken or damaged to easily. I am planning on Hunt Training my guy's soon. I practice at home with a small freeze dried pheasant wing. They do pretty well at pointing it up. Mostly they just want to eat it. We are on a little over five wonderful acres with lots of Pine Trees, so the dogs have lots of room to run and play.

I contacted weirmaraner rescue in 2006 and was amazed by the number of weirmaraners which needed re-homed. I re-homed Kaiser (ottis was the name he came with) he was 7 months old. He was a fantastic companion for Heidi and put a new lease of life into her. She sadly passed away at Easter aged 13 years. Kaisers is fine but I am considering a companion for him. I would recommend a Weirmaraner to anyone one with get up and go and a sense of humour!

I have previously had golden retrievers as pets so dont know too much about weimaraners. Both my partner and I are active so are happy for a dog to want lots of exercise. We have our own company and the office is situated close to a big park. Do you think a weimaraner would be happy at an office during the day (so getting company) as long as he/she gets lots of exercise in the morning and during the day? can you also recommend a breeder?

Since she sat down on my foot at age 4 months and went to sleep, she has spent most of the time touching me or my wife. We go for long, long walks in our woods, and along the North San Gabriel river. Well, she wants to go out.... We took three teenagers to the British Isles some years ago, and Scotland was our favorite. We rented a car, and drove, and drove. And fell in love. That's the reason I visited this site.

It is also illegal to transfer dogs and pups out of Scotland to have them docked in other parts of the UK. Owners who do so can expect hefty fines and/or imprisonment for carrying out this activity.

She was totally out of control! She was/is hard work, wilful and stubborn. She has to wear a soft muzzle every time we take her out as she 'hoovers' the pavement in front of her, but we would not part with her. Where we are she is, she loves being close to you. She is beginning to relax and show a side of herself that has taken eightenn months to allow out. We need to find a good kennelling facility for her when we go on vacation and are finding huge difficulty in doing so. Would love to know where to find a Weim friendly facility!

We were advised by our vet to try chemo along with a course of steroids. The first week of chemo was fine but then things got really bad for the next 2 weeks. I guess the reason I am writing this to you strangers is because I never want to see another weim suffer the way my old mate did. He only lived 3 months after I took him off chemo which I believe was due to the steroids anyway. I will never forget my brave boy. Hope this helps someone. Good luck

Comments: I am the proud owner of a 10 yr old dog called techno He is like a son to me , a brother to my son , and the bairn of my wifes life. Wherever she goes he goes (second skin). When you buy a weimaraner you do not realise you will never be able to go to the toilet in privacy ever again. A loyal companion to the end . The warmest welcome you will ever receive but the saddest face when you have to leave alone. None the less i am currently looking for a brother for him (pup) many thanks David Bain

She loves company and is very obedient. She loves her walks in the country and along the beach as she loves swimming in the water we have so much fun and pleasure with her a great addition to the family. Could not live without her. We are interested in any activities in the Weimaraner club calendar where we can meet other owners and learn of their experiences as we are considering breeding Rhanna but not sure Would welcome any advice Kenny & Carollyn Baikie Bishopbriggs Glasgow 4/10/06

Comments: I have always thought Weimaraners were stunning dogs, but I have never had one. My parents have always had Border Collies. I thought I would probably get one one day, but was bitten by one this morning on my way to work in Dundee. The dog was on a lead and being closely controlled by what looked like a responsible owner. When we passed each other on the pavement, it lunged and bit my hand. It didn't break the skin but was very close to doing so. I have spoken to my colleague and his dog was also recently attacked by one. A friend also mentioned that they were a bit mad when I mentioned that I liked them. Any thoughts... cause I have seriously gone off the breed!

Merlin had previously been treated really badly and had apparently been beaten, this came to light a few years ago when he developed severe arthritis and had difficulty walking, we had to get Merlin put to sleep a couple of weeks ago, and we are all devastated. These dogs are the best and have such good characters, Merlin used to talk to use regularly and we knew exactly what he wanted. We are currently looking for another one to keep Tosca happy as she is missing the big guy big time. Look after your dogs they deserve it.

I will always remember him. He was the most intellegent animal that I ever saw. Every night we went to bed he would suck his one foot- just like a baby sucking his thumb.....he was the best-unfortunately one month ago the VET started treating him for double pneumonia....he just could not get better-and

I took hom to the VET every week....and on Monday, 2nd Jan 2006, he died in my arms in the VET's room..... they did some autopsy on him and discovered that he had heart probelms. For all the people in the world that own one- please take good care of them- they are your best friend.

Comments: Our 7 year old dog Monty has just had an operation on what the vet called a dry eye. He was not producing tears in one eye and it caused a lot of discomfort and his eye to close up. It was operated on this week and things are looking good again. They moved taste glands up from the mouth into the eye so whenever he eats and smells food his eye waters. Amazing but this actually seems to have worked since he crys everytime he eats now keeping the eye clear. It was well worth it!

think I'll find myself with a wonderful friend for life if I do. I have to admit... (although I now realise how shallow a comment it may sometimes seem to many respectable, responsible owners and understandably so)...this particular breed of dog has a truly Majestic, almost Princely appearance... the dog named 'Blue' in the sites gallery... JUS LOOK AT HIM!!! He's truly magnificent. Congrats to his owners for rearing what can only be described as a truly beautiful creature. Im looking forward now to regularly visiting this helpful site.

I moved back with my parents just over 2 1/2 years ago and for the past year Toby has changed and become very demanding and constantly cries if he does not get what he wants. An example of this is if he is left in a room on his own or if he does not get taken a walk as soon as I enter the room. I have tried speaking with the vet who did not have any suggestions so please if anyone can help let me know as I am unsure of how much longer my parents are going to put up with this behaviour. Comments: Hi! I was searching for information on the web that could help us and the veterinarians find a treatment for our 16 month old weimaraner pup (neutered-male). We rescued him from an animal welfare agency here in Connecticut, USA, in September 2003. He is a very active puppy and loved to run with my teenage son. Around the end of March 2004 we noted him developing a limp in his left hind leg (his discomfort is clearly isolated to the hip and not associated with his lower leg or paw). He has always walked with his left leg in a slight external rotation and abduction. This has become even more prominent over the past 2 months. He also has a mass in the left shoulder muscle. The x-ray of the hip shows mild dysplasia--all vets including ortho specialist feel it is not what is causing the limp/discomfort AND the biopsy of the shoulder lump shows mast cells. So we waited for 3 weeks at the recommendation of the vet to re-x-ray the left hip and see if any bone tumors show up. Yesterday (May 12, 2004) the 2nd x-ray is again negative for any bone tumors and for any bone changes. The dog's limp gets continuously worse and we are desperately searching for any answers that may guide us toward treatment. He has also had a complete blood chemistry profile which was normal WITH THE EXCEPTION that his eosinophil count is markedly high. There is a disease associated with eosinophils however his symptoms are not as described in the literature on this disease and therefore our vet is dubious as to whether that is the problem. Next we are going to try acupuncture with a veterinarian who specializes in this. If anyone has any information you think may help us please email us. Any response with information will be so greatly appreciated. This pup has brought so much fun and laughter to our home and family and he has the greatest sense of humor of any dog I have ever owned. My 80 year old mother-in-law lives with us and loves to read in the afternoons. Duke (pup) will go into see her and if she doesn't put the book down to pay attention to him he takes his paw and knocks the book out of her hands--sending it flying across the room!! She laughs!!! Thank you for reading and "listening" to our story. JM

Comments: This is the first time I have visited the site and I am sure I will visit it again. As an owner of two Weimaraners myself I loved the picture gallery. Jax who will turn 2 in April and Ozzy who is 1 are a pair of characters and are so much fun. The whole family get so much love from them both.

Comments: I have visited a few times and I was so impressed that I decide to join the club. I am fortunate to have a 5 year old Weimaraner dog called Solo who is the light of my life. We are planning to do some 'fun' things with the club before we let him loose on anything to serious in the showing ring. He wont give anyone any serious competition yet but he is incredibly handsome..and he knows it!! Keep up the good work.

Comments: Like the few other people in the dreambook we are also from Scotland and looking for a breeder we may find it a little harder because we live on the Isle Of Skye (5 miles from Portree), but are prepared to travel if you are able to help us find a breeder after the festive period. We would be glad to receive any information on breeders in Scotland if it is possible. Myself (Samantha) especially would be grateful if you could help us home one of these wonderful dogs.
